i stand innocent on trial, judged by my peers that murder, rape & abuse their own bodies. the cold winds that have carried my once strong brothers away still wages its' war against me, but i persevere. each day i hear that a good friend has fallen makes me so much stronger, and i must wish them well, though i know their quest is foolish. once they fail they can't come back, the struggle has no room for the weak. nailed

Dear Asshole,

We found a copy of your zine at the DMF. (thank god we found it because there is no way in hell we'd pay 3.50 for it!) Violence is not the answer to anything. Do you actually think making fun of old ladies is appropriate? You're going to be old some day and assuming that you're a guy, I hope you're as bald as my ass. Shooting, raping, robbing and pillaging are no ways to start a revolution. I bet you killed at least 10 squids to make the ink for this sorry, sack of shit, piece of crap zine. Why don't you think about someone else but yourself once in a while. And as for any of those bands you documented in the pictures...FUCK THEM. My friends and I will make sure no one supports any band related to that type of thinking. Maybe they'll think twice before ever having anything to do with you again! (of course after they move to another state and change their names.) Why don't you use your computer for more worthwhile things like protecting other living creatures instead of supporting their demise, you fuck.

On The Road With THINK FAST!

Last summer I sat around the house listening to first press Gorilla Biscuits seven inches and writing letters to vegan str8 edge zines and skating. It wasn't a bad summer, but I surely jumped at the chance to get out on the road in June 1994 with the raddest edge crew in the world - THINK FAST! Cory Str8 called me late in May and asked if I could hump their gear on their first U.S. tour, and I said "FUCK YEAH CORY!"

The first three shows were cancelled, but we managed to maintain our all-vegan diet, consisting mainly of uncooked Ramens in the back of Fred Edge's Dad's van. By the time we got to Philly, we were ready to dance hard. The show was supposed to have been with Sheer Terror, but when we showed up we found out that they cancelled and would be playing with a bunch of local bands. The first band was called Glub or something like that, and sucked totally. Worst of all, not only did all three members of the band engage in the drinking of alcohol during their set, but the bass player wore a leather vest. I told Cory Str8 that he'd better set the bitch correct and teach her the evils of her ways. A fucking woman, too. Bitches have no place at Think Fast! shows, especially leather wearing bitches.

Cory has no patience for ignorance, and soon confronted the murderer about her leather. She wouldn't listen to his wisdom and walked off. Cory said he'd forget he ever saw her and would enlighten the crowd during the Think Fast! set. Boy did he ever. It's too bad most of the crowd were too ignorant to appreciate the wisdom of this great band and the place was mostly empty. Fuck Philly and their drunk leather wearing scene full of ignorant bitches. On to CT.

Danbury, CT was more up to par. Lots of Str8 kids trading lots of tasty vegan recipes. Think Fast! sold 6 seven inches and 5 XL T-Shirts. Even did a Youth Of Today cover. This was why I went on tour with these guys. Cory dedicated "Str8 To The Grave" to me. Fuck yeah.

Unfortunately, we only could play one other show, since there were numerous cancellations. I guess the U.S. isn't ready for a hard hitting Str8 Edge band like Think Fast! Plus, Norman Think had to go to summer school starting on June 13, because he failed Junior History. Next summer, though, we'll get the fucking Str8 Vegan message to all the kids all across the fucking country!

Str8 Til I Fucking Die,

Hank Edge
